'Loombah' and the George Bruce Family

A new exhibition in our Museum Foyer

George Bruce & Janet Murray

History behind the Exhibition. The descendants of George Bruce's family (Stuart Hibberd and Andrew Hibberd) from Sydney came to our museum earlier in the year and presented us with a very large package which contained both printed and digital photos, family history, and land details of "Loombah." They had completed a large amount of research on the Bruce family.

On the 30th August, Anne Spencer (sister of Stuart) came from Sydney (with her family) and presented at the Molong RSL auditorium a wonderful insight into the George Bruce Family. George Bruce 1830-1908 was known as the "Squire of "Loombah" and his wool became known on the London market as "Loombah Gold". Such was the huge regard for its quality from his breeding of Merino sheep. This skill and expertise in wool production was continued by his sons Sage and Robert Bruce who continued to win many top show awards in Australia including many Championships at Sydney Royal Show.

More than 40 people attended the presentation with many local descendants of the Bruce family attending to hear the presentation. It was enlightening with detailed information of the Bruce family, detailed maps of "Loombah" and surrounding "Bruce" properties, digital photos, and a family tree. One of the stand-out features was the wedding photo of William Glasson and Annie Bruce from 1905 in which most of the family are identified.,

This family encompassed Bruces, Glassons, Abernathys, Andersons and the Murrays.

The committee would like to thank Scott Sullivan who brought to the museum an old ledger from the Black's General Store in Cumnock. This was from the time of George and Sage Bruce and provided some extremely interesting insights into household and farm supplies.

The presentation was followed by afternoon tea at the museum organised by Lynne Robertson and her team of helpers. Those in attendance were able to view the wonderful collection of old Bruce photos now displayed in the foyer and in verandah cabinets.

ORANGE NATIONAL FIELD DAYS

What an eventful few days the team had with the Orange National Field Days with our display "RURAL RECOLLECTIONS".

After a few planning visits out to "The Shed", to take measurements and reviewing the materials that the walls were made of in order to work out the best way to attach our information. The team from Molong Historical Society and Museum decided on the various themes to display:

Leather works with an old saddles, leather sewing machine and bootmakers tools.

Pests that created problems for the farmers, mainly rabbits, and kangaroos. The loans of a rabbit coat and kangaroo rug crated great interest.

The old wine making barrel and bottle corker and a lovely collection of framed photos about bees and their habits.

A lot of photos showing what life on the land was like and the delight some folks showed when they recognised old family members within those photos or the memories of having to do those tasks.

Methods of clearing early land and the stock that was on them-sheep and cattle, then some of the crops planted.

Early tools used in homestead gardens, the heavy homemade wheelbarrow and the lawn mowers, the reel and early petrol mower created a lot of interest.

The display on Fairbridge Farm ignited some memories and stories. Many commented on how informative the farm's display was and it's contribution to Molong's history and the development of the children who were there.

Some interest was shown in the early methods of acquiring land and the maps created quite a few comments. (We had to stop people from putting their fingers on the maps)

It was interesting listening to the folks that claimed to have used some of the kitchen implements in younger years and "remember when nanna or mum used that!" was a frequent comment made. Even some folks wanted copies of the old recipes because they had grown up enjoying some of the meals.

Some locals from Borenore even enjoyed the old map of the village and some of the photos that went with it.

In all it was a very successful public relations exercise, that money couldn't buy, promoting the museum. Many folks said that they had no idea that Molong had such an interesting collection, and one lady from another museum was so impressed with the standard of such a temporary exhibition that she would make it a point on her next visit to the area to visit the museum.

We estimated that there must have been over 1,000 people visit "The Shed".

All this was due to the dedicated team from the Society who contributed to the planning, setting up of the displays and the volunteers who manned it over the 3 days.

A job well done.

Elizabeth Griffin

GOVERNMENT STOCK STATION AT MOLONG

In May 1825, a Stock Station was established at Molong Plains to act as a staging place for the movement of stock from Bathurst to the convict settlement at Wellington. John Williams was appointed over-seer of five other stockmen. Their ration of wheat was to be supplied from the Wellington station.

Before the end of the month, there was some trouble with the local aborigines and Williams advised the Superintendent of Stock, Mr John Maxwell, of the occurrence. On the 6th June, Maxwell wrote the following letter:

*Stock Dept, Bathurst
6th June 1825*

Dear John Williams,

Your letter of the 31st ult. Has been received and to prevent a recurrence of the trouble from the black natives 2 soldiers are to be stationed at Molong Plains to whom yourself will pay every attention in consideration of their having been sent for your personal attention.

You will receive from John Thompson 30 head of cattle, viz. 8 heifers and 22 female calves, which have been branded with numbers. You will send a receipt for them and also acknowledge them as an increase in your returns. A copy of which is herewith sent, so that your clerk may be enabled to make them out correctly.

*You will receive from Dorman:
120lbs of pork, 80 lbs salt beef, also 4.5 lbs of soap being 6 weeks rations of meat and soap for yourself and 5men, which victuals you all from 11June to 22nd July.*

John Dorman has 1 weeks ration for Edward Bend who you are to immediately send to Bathurst and receive in his place Henry Fontenby., 3 suits of slop clothing

- 1. No 79 for yourself*
- 2. No 28 for Northey*
- 3. No 140 for Mail*

*3 lbs tobacco being 8 weeks allowance for yourself and 5 men @ 1 oz. per week.
12 sheets writing paper, 3 quills, 24 wafers, and 4 B. returns.*

I have to direct that yourself and men render every assistance to Gaffey, Smith and Dorman in building a good substantial hut containing 2 apartments for the military and yourselves. The said men have three weeks rations.

I have also to direct that when your herd is bedded out, that you be careful in selecting heifers that are near calving and have them constantly followed and yarded every night until they have calves, when you will turn them with the herd and select others of the same description from time to time.

There is no record of when the Stock Station at Molong ceased to operate, but it was, probably, about 1830 as the Wellington establishment was broken up towards the end of that year.

(Letters of John Maxwell, MacSmith and Lloyd, Shoestring Press, 1982)

OBSERVATIONS OF AN EARLY TRAVELER (Part 1)

MOLONG EXPRESS SATURDAY JANUARY 1935

(Contributed by William Folster)

On Sunday, November 7, 1841, John Hood, a distinguished Englishman of Stoneridge, Berkshire, arrived in the locality of Molong, on a visit to a son who emigrated from England, some three years previously. A stay was made at the old inn kept by John Peisley (later first member of the Legislative Assembly for Orange) this according to his description

"The last hostelry within the boundaries of the colony in this direction, and one of the best men in the colony"

Peisley's inn was located near where the Railway Crossing Gates are in Summer Street Orange, or about the site of the existing Victoria Hotel.

"Discussing the economic conditions of the country, Hood said "A little rivulet (now known as Molong Rivulet) divides the colony of New South Wales from the wilderness which (however is settled by stockholders nearly two hundred miles further west (1941). All the country within the boundaries has either been bought from the Government by individuals or is least from it. All beyond the boundaries is occupied by settlers holding a license from the Government for which they pay an annual tax of ten pounds-upon which is also levied the only direct tax in the country, namely sixpence for every ox and three-half pence for every sheep."

CANOBOLAS MOUNTAINS

Hood's visit to the Orange District at such an early period revealed a most primitive colony. Settled in one of the earlier forms of dwellings, then called a gunyah, Hood, junior, welcomed his father under real colonial conditions. The property was situated 14 miles from Peisley's Inn and 14 miles from Boree, and the sheep runs extended to the towering top of the lofty Connobolas (as Hood spelt the name) No stream mill or house mill had yet made its appearance in the district, the wheat being ground by handmill. The nearest mills were located at Bathurst and Sydney. The baking bread, which was unleavened, was affected in the ashes of the fire. Later this bread came to be called "damper" generally. In 1841 Bathurst was the nearest town and there was located the nearest evidence of market civilization, the church and physician together there.

Postal facilities existed at Boree and Peisley's Inn, the post being once a week. The Canobolas Range was the haunt of bushrangers and evil-doers and instances occurred when station-owners were disposed of their holdings, and the requisite license to keep flocks, because of harbouring such characters.

Boree represented a little wooden town in 1841, being constituted of a great many huts, Boree Nyrang (Little Boree) was then held by R. Barton ESQ, Boree Cabonne occupied by Captain Raine. The Boree blacks were led by a King called Sandy and were for the most part living in reasonable proximity to the stations, doing in some instances, odd jobs for the owners in consideration of gifts given in return.

OBSERVATIONS OF AN EARLY TRAVELLER (Continued)

Sheep shearing was an interesting process at Boree in the early times. The first step was to place the sheep in the man's hand, who, holding it by the fore-feet, rolled it backwards and forward in the washing pool, whence it passed from one man to the next, until all the impurities were taken from the wool. Next followed the clipping and packing into bales which were branded N.S.W.W. (New South Wales Wool), the initials of the grower, together with an indication as to the degree of fineness and the number of the bale.

THE BOREE BLACKS

The blacks met within Molong district when the first settlers arrived were not hostile, as might have been anticipated. Generally speaking, they were a fine-built tribe, their physique being well above the average of the tribes in the colony.

Known as the Boree blacks, the tribe frequenting their area, were led by a chief who could be called handsome. Acute, intelligent, and clever, no youth would dare go out from the tribe on any pretext without his consent.

An accurate knowledge of localities was the equipment of every black, because and encroachment on the reserves of other tribes led to war, poaching and trespassing upon domains where game abounded in the territory of another tribe provoking trouble very quickly. Caution was always exercised by an aboriginal in approaching a waterhole and his movements were furtive to a degree.

The language or dialect of the Boree tribe was known as "Wirradurrie" was poetic in its description of everyday events. As an example, the following shows the manner of conveying an idea or fact:

Oquarapata euroka hoi Bring water, the sun is sick and dying.
Orquoyapita euroka naroi Make haste, the sun jumps up.

To find more about John Hood's visit to the area, read the publication from the Orange Historical Society, "MAPPING ORANGE"

'Mapping Orange: How explorers, surveyors and cartographers made their mark'. The book is the result of two years' research by members of the historical society and explores some of the earliest maps and sketches of Orange, bringing to life the stories of the surveyors and cartographers who created them.

WHAT AM I (from last issue)

Thank you Cameron for asking the question? Many people have viewed this item and have given us several suggestions. The results have given us 2 trains of thought.

- A handle attached to a belt or rope to tie round your swag when camping (on horse back)
- A CHIFNEY BIT (anti—rearing bit) for difficult horses during training.

Thank you to Kerry W, Ron B, John H and Orange Show Society for your replies.
